FamilySearch recently sent out an email to its RootsTech subscribers with a must-see quote: "The Family History Guide" is a tremendously good resource for experiencing your homeland and connecting to your ancestors. Using information from sites like Ancestry and FamilySearch, discovering your story has never been easier." The email then links to our Ancestors and Homelands video at <https://www.familysearch.org/rootstech/rtc2021/session/ancestors-and-homeland-research-with-the-family-history-guide> produced by FamilySearch and Scott and Angelle Anderson of The Family History Guide Association. We are honored to be a go-to resource for FamilySearch. Watch for a blog post on Monday with more details about their involvement in RootsTech. Ancestors and Homeland Research with The Family History Guide

Scott and Angelle Anderson

Experience your heritage in multiple languages, make family history discoveries with step-by-step guidance, and find direct links to articles, videos, and webinars all in one place: The Family History Guide! This free website's Countries section offers links that take you directly to information on sites like FamilySearch and Ancestry. Connecting the past and the present has never been easier, more efficient, or more fun!

Closing Comments

Roslyn is actually related to Angelle Anderson who is an outstanding genealogist, blogger and much more including being a fully certified family historian specializing in helping people find, access and record information, and connecting with their ancestors as well as is the marketing director for The Family History Guide. Having relatives like this is a real plus. My brother in-law has an assignment to contact her ASAP as there are family history needs that need to be addressed sooner than later!
