

Don't Put All Your Eggs in One Basket Because Ancestry.com has 20+ Million Users for Networking Even Beyond FamilySearch.Org

Finding Ancestry Researchers: There may be a number of Ancestry users who are researching some of the same people you are. You can find these users with the Member Search feature at www.ancestry.com/community/membersearch/interests in Ancestry, focused on research interest. You can also specify the Surname, Location, and Year for ancestor events you are interested in. You'll get a list of users with links to their public trees with names in common. See also Ancestry Project 5: Help at www.thefhguide.com/project-5-help-an03.html#b for more collaboration tips. (See all tips at www.thefhguide.com/tip-of-the-day.html)

1. Ancestry.com: Best genealogy site overall

My niece is a self-made genealogist who has recently become a zealous family history buff. Over those past 5 years, she has networked with many of her relatives previously unknown to her resulting that she now teaches me on how to use Ancestry.com more efficiently and she has significantly assisted me with new original resources that were only available on Ancestry. Networking is the secret ingredient in doing extensive family history research. Never underestimate networking with others because you can and will discover more family trees at Ancestry.com than you can imagine because genealogy is the second most popular hobby in the USA according to ABC News at <https://householdquotes.co.uk/ultimate-genealogy-guide/>. And if you don't quite believe that fact then just ask ABC News. ... acknowledges that Genealogy appears to be "America's second-most popular hobby." Do not underestimate those 20+ million Ancestry patrons for a deep family story and perhaps most of them do not have FamilySearch.com accounts. Perhaps this is the perfect time to network with them!!!

Fortunately, all members of our Church can register for free membership through their FamilySearch.org account. But non-members can also use all of them for free at any of our 5,100 family history centers in 140 countries throughout the world. For more information about all these four major family history websites, go to: <https://foothills-family-history.org/node/55> and you will not be disappointed.
