

Updates from The Family History Guide Blog

... See the latest news about your free learning and training site for family history!

What I find almost every time I give genealogical presentations is that many people are "interested" in genealogy but either have no idea how to get started or do not know how to progress past the "casual interest" stage. I often talk to people who pull out a stack of paper and say something to the effect of what should I do now? The answer to both these questions and many others is simple: The Family History Guide.

How effective is The Family History Guide? Well, it has been used now for years to teach the missionaries at the Brigham Young University Family History Library and some of the missionaries at the Salt Lake City, Utah, Family History Library. It is used now by thousands of people around the world to advance family history and genealogy in a major way. It is now an official training partner of FamilySearch.org.

Here are the latest updates for your attention as of their 04/27/2020 edition:

The New Africa Country Pages

By Bob Taylor on Apr 26, 2020 02:04 pm

You've probably seen the South Africa country page in The Family History Guide. Now it is being joined by four new country pages: Democratic Republic of the Congo Ghana Ivory Coast (Cote d'Ivoire) Nigeria You can access these pages from the Countries menu by clicking All Countries and selecting them from the list; or, you can select Asia/Pacific/Africa and then...

Update: Ancestry Academy Videos

By Bob Taylor on Apr 26, 2020 02:03 pm

Ancestry Academy has published training videos on a wide variety of genealogy topics. many of which are linked from The Family History Guide. You may not be aware that recently Ancestry Academy has made some changes in their video catalog. Here's a summary: The URL formats for most of the articles have changed. The new URLs are included in The...

How to Analyze Genealogical Sources: Part Three

By Bob Taylor on Apr 26, 2020 02:02 pm

This article by James Tanner appeared recently in the Genealogy's Star blog site. It has been a while since I started out with a pancake illustration. This is the best example of what is involved with the levels of jurisdiction in geographical naming conventions. There is a legal definition of the...

Additional Postings to Learn and Master The Family History Guide

- Updates from The Family History Guide Blog: or see April 27, 2020 posting
- New Posts from The Family History Guide Blog for 04/06/2020: or see April 7, 2020 posting
- Stay UP-TO-DATE with The Family History Guide! or see March 30, 2020 posting
- The Family History Companion Guide: or see March 5, 2020 posting

- The Family History Guide's Come, Follow Me Companion Lessons: Week 47: December 2 - December 8 or see November 24 posting
- The Family History Guide Tutorials or see July 12 and May 29 posting
- The Family History Guide: The most extensive series of Tutorials for learning FamilySearch, Ancestry, My Heritage and Find My Past with Original research with over 150+ countries: visit May 29 posting

Need a Charge with your Family History Pursuits?

You will not be disappointed if you refer to this Facebook's Table of Contents for Foothills Ward Temple and Family History Facebook Group: 1) <https://tinyurl.com/yxuw7m2s> and 2) <https://foothills-family-history.org/> where you can conveniently view, save and print out instructional files. The latter URL allows you to creatively sort through the extensive Table of Contents by postings by: a) date of posting, 2) topic subject and/or 3) posted title. It will take me awhile to complete the transition to this new system.

Closing Comments

No doubt about it, become familiar with The Family History Guide as an essential part of learning and mastering FamilySearch.org which is the main stay for everybody in conducting original family history research. Join the 21st century and take advantage of its unique and dynamic partnership FamilySearch.org. Bravo to Bob Taylor and all of his tireless efforts in sharing this information with me

Welcome to

The Family History Guide

Your free learning, research, and training center for genealogy.

Countries and Ethnic | Vault | About

New: Click here for the Quick Start

Projects: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9

Approved Training Resource for FamilySearch

